Congratulations!

We know you have worked hard to complete this paperwork. At your first appointment you can expect:

- To meet with a trained local area counselor. Counselors are certified by the National Foundation for Credit Counseling.
- To participate in a non-judgmental counseling session to discuss your options. The completed paperwork helps give your counselor a snapshot of your current financial situation. More time is then available during your appointment to review your options and possible solutions.
- To make your own decisions. Your counselor will not be telling you what to do. Most likely you will need to go home to consider suggestions from the counseling session or to discuss the options with your spouse/significant other or a trusted family member/friend.
- To pay a small income based fee for services provided. Services will be provided without regard for client's ability to pay. No one is denied service if unable to pay.
